Jsing the built-in answering system and voicemail service

You can use your answering system and voicemai service together by setting your answering system to answer before voicemail service answers as described below. To learn how to program your voicemail settings, contact your telephone service

If you are on a call, or if the answering system s busy recording a message and you receive another call, the second caller can leave a oicemail message/

Set your answering system to answer calls at least two rings earlier than your voicemail is set to answer. For example, if your voicemail answers after six rings, set your answering system to answer after four rings. Some voicemail providers may program the delay before answering calls in seconds instead of rings. In this case, allow six seconds per ring when determining the appropriate setting.

etrieve voicemail from telephone ervice

Voicemail is a feature available from most telephone service providers. It may be included with your telephone service, or may be optional. Fees may apply

Retrieve voicemail

When you received a voicemail, the handset and the telephone base display 还 and New voicemail. To retrieve, you typically dial an access number provided by your telephone service provider, and then enter a security code. Contact your telephone service provider for instructions on how to configure the voicemail settings and listen to messages

After you have listened to all new voicemail messages, the indicators on the handset and the telephone base turn off automatically

If you have retrieved your voicemail while away from home, and the telephone still displays the new voicemail indicators, use this feature to turn off the indicators.

This feature turns off the indicators only, it does not delete your voicemail messages.

1. Press MENU when the handset/telephone base is not in use

- 2. Scroll to $Settings, then press SELECT.
- 3. Scroll to CIr voicemail #, then press SELECT 4. Press SELECT again to confirm.
